COVID - 19 CONTINGENCY PLAN

Contingency Plan Guiding Principles

Missouri Southern State University has opened for the Spring 2021 semester with classes being offered face-to-face, online and in blended format. The ongoing pandemic will require contingency plans in the event they are needed at some point during the academic year. These plans could impact a wide array of university operations, including the way classes or services are delivered.

Over-Arching Goal

If required to implement alternative or contingency plans during the academic year, the university's goal is not to move all classes to online or remote delivery nor close the entire campus, if at all possible. Instead, the university would temporarily suspend or modify individual courses, activities, programs, facilities, and operations as necessary.

This process could result in some operations being affected while other operations might continue as planned. For example, online courses will not be impacted just because their seated counterparts are temporarily suspended or converted to remote delivery.

The contingency plan analysis may also change depending on the course or operation at issue. For example, under similar circumstances, a laboratory class might continue to meet in person while a lecture-based class might temporarily move online.

Guiding principles

To assist in determining actions appropriate for this process, the university will use the following principles as a frame of reference for decision making:

- Impact on the health and physical well-being of students, faculty, and staff
- Impact on the university's mission
  - Mission considerations include:
    - Academic quality, enrollment, student success, and the student experience
- Impact on the mental health and morale of students, faculty, and staff
- Impact on university risk management and student, faculty and staff compliance
- Impact on our state, and the local community
- Other data and factors

Using the aforementioned principles, campus administrators will evaluate the following data and factors when determining whether and when to implement contingency plans:

1. *Available campus case data, including but not limited to:
  - A. Number and rate of change of active cases
  - B. Number and rate of change of quarantine/isolation cases
  - C. **Faculty, staff, and student availability and absenteeism
2. Isolation and quarantine space available for on-campus students.
3. Access to COVID-19 testing and other preventative resources such as masks, other PPE, cleaning supplies and vaccinations.
4. Capacity of the local health care system (hospital COVID bed space and ventilators) and directives and/or guidance from health officials and federal, state and local governments.
5. Positivity rates of Jasper County and/or other surrounding counties.

There is not a particular threshold that will trigger a specific contingency plan. Rather, decisions will be based upon the evaluation of these and any additional factors that arise as a result of changes to the campus and community cases.

The Board of Governors will be consulted before a decision is reached to suspend all or substantially all of the university's operations. University administrators will make decisions on other contingency plans and report those decisions at regularly scheduled board and/or pandemic committee meetings.

MSSU will use a phased approach to dealing with changes in the campus and community caseload.

*Available data includes information sent solely to the Willcoxon Health Center by campus constituents. If information is not reported to the Willcoxon Health Center, MSSU is unable to provide accurate dashboard counts to the campus community.

**There is no central repository to report cumulative absences for students nor employees. These data would be shared via direct communication in the institution's existing governance structure.
